YOUTHFUL GUITARIST
TO PERFORM AT UM NOV. 3-8

MISSOULA--

A 22-year-old folk guitarist from Canada will perform six nights next week at the University of Montana in his continuing "Coffee House Circuit."

The musician is Dave Bradstreet, 22, who began singing and playing a banjo at the age of 8. He will perform nightly Nov. 3-8 in the Gold Oak Room of the University Center.

The program is one in a continuing series sponsored during each academic year by the Program Council of the Associated Students at UM. Admission to any of Bradstreet's performances next week at UM will be 35 cents, with free coffee provided during the songs.

A native of England, Bradstreet came to Canada with his family in 1956. They lived in Toronto and Oakville and returned to England for the holidays in 1960, where he inherited a century-old banjo. He later played the instrument in high school, performing at various assemblies and hootenannies in Canada.

He and a friend, Dave Steel, formed a duo, "Bradstreet and Steel," and together they toured a number of establishments in Canada and London.

Bradstreet now is a composer and he has been featured on "The Day It Is" on the Canadian Broadcasting Co. and in the Toronto Parks Concerts and the Mariposa Folk Festival. His first single recording has been scheduled for R.C.A. Victor.
